

FCC should deny the broadcaster's request. This same issue arose years ago, broadcasters vs. sony I think it was -- the consumer HAS THE RIGHT to tape, for their personal use, broadcast program material.

To deny this right to consumers would only grant the Corporations yet more control over what we watch, and how we watch it. Is that wise?

PLEASE consider not only denying the Corporations this, but also consider looking long and hard at their ultimate goal -- make US pay each and every time we access the garbage they produce.

Kind regards,
